Dear CNN,

You had a crew here several weeks ago to interview me about a lawsuit I'd filed to make the Zapruder film of the JFK assassination freely available.

Before they left they asked to borrow two of the books I've published. They said they'd return them.

You did return them, wastefully and expensively and unfit for sale. I am a small publisher and I sell only books in good condition.

If you had used the mail or UPS and had wrapped the books they'd have gotten here in good condition. Instead you sent them back unwrapped and by a private messenger, all the way from Washington.

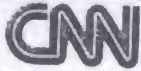

Not only were the books damaged and unfit for sale - they have labels across the covers. This in itself would have rendered them unfit for sale.

Accordingly I return them to you with this letter and ask that you pay me for them. The total price is $16.00. I'd appreciate it if you would also add the postage, at the special book rate this is $1.60, as you can see, considerably less than ~~take~~ 50 miles each way in a private car.

Sincerely,
